Trouble on the French Frontier.

It is reported from Kwangsi that the French authorities on the Tongking-Kwangsi frontier have been lately complaining to Viceroy Tsou that roving bands of rebels have crossed over into French territory for the purpose of plunder, threatening that, if the Chinese authorities are not able to prevent this in future, the French Government will have to police both sides of the frontier in self defence. In view of this, therefore, Viceroy Tsou has ordered strong reinforcements to join the frontier patrols while a large body of troops well-armed and well equipped in every way will hold certain strategic points on the frontier to reinforce any troops that may be hard pressed by the enemy.

Accident on the 'Monmouthshire.'

While transshipping a boiler from the s.s. Monmouthshire to a lighter last night, the derrick broke, and the boiler and derrick fell into the water. The cause of the accident was faulty construction of the ironwork at the end of the derrick, called the goose neck. This goose neck supports the derrick, and was supposed to have been tested and passed before being put into the derrick. It appears that the boiler had been lifted out of the after hold, and was suspended over the side, preparatory to being deposited into the lighter. The chief mate was standing almost directly under the derrick giving instructions to the third mate, when he heard the iron snap, and without looking up he and the third mate jumped aside. They were only just in time, for the derrick crashed to the deck not more than a couple of feet from where they were standing. The boiler fell on to the lighter, and after gradually turning over rolled into the water, taking the derrick with it. The cooies (about 30) on the deck of the steamer, cleared away as soon as the derrick snapped, otherwise the boiler could have been prevented from falling off the lighter. A ventilator on deck was doubled up like a piece of paper, and the rails along the side of the ship were slightly damaged, but beyond that no damage was done. No blame can be attached to the officers or men of the Monmouthshire, as such a break might easily occur in any machine. All the gear and tackle held fast, although when the derrick broke a severe jolt was given to the rest of the gear in use.For THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.—If the blood is laden with impurities it spreads disease as it circulates through the organs of the human ranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities
